1. Describe two distinct pieces of evidence indicating that thinking about depression as a chemical imbalance in the brain, to be treated medically through antidepressants, is at best an incomplete understanding.