

Helen Pluckrose, interviewed by Yascha Mounk on The Good Fight

1. Helen Pluckrose and Yascha Mounk hold that (a) women and racial minorities often have distinctive experiences but not a distinctive epistemology; and (b) the search for universal knowledge and morality can and must include those experiences. In what ways are they supporting a modern approach to truth and challenging a postmodern approach?